President's Message

Spring has sprung early! The beginning of March feels like Masters Week with all of the Azaleas blooming and 80 degree weather. The Pool Committee is starting to hire pool and swim team employees. We have hired a new Pool Manager for this year, Linda Weddle. She is teacher at Saint Mary's and has several family members that are pool members here. We are actively searching for lifeguards, concession stand workers, Head Coach, and assistant coaches for the Montclair Mako's. Please see below on how to find the job postings on Indeed.

I wanted to apologize on not communicating in the February Newsletter the Quarterly HOA meeting for March. Because of that, we are moving that meeting to Monday April 18th at 6.00 pm at the Winding Wood Park. Please bring your chairs!

I wanted to thank Melanie Meaders, our Secretary on the Montclair Board. As I transitioned into the role of President, I had big shoes to fill. Trent Mercer supported the neighborhood so well for a long time and I couldn't handle all that he did. Melanie has graciously taken over being the liaison between the Legal group and the Lawn Maintenance group that we use. This is on top of being the Secretary, Welcoming Committee leader, and somehow plants flowers and sets up our Annual Craft Fair too! Melanie, thank you for supporting Montclair so well in all that you do!

As we are getting ready for the new pool season, we are planning a work day to clean and spruce up the Pool area on Saturday, April 23rd. We would love your support! We will need volunteers to help with yard work, painting, building new benches, organizing, and fixing up the bathrooms. Come join us to make the pool ready for the coming months!

I hope you enjoy the extra month of Spring this year!

Greg

Gardening IN MONTCLAIR

with Suzanne Thomas, Master Gardener

April is the month when spring really happens in Montclair. The weather becomes something we wish we could bottle and keep all summer long. Things we do in April set the stage for the rest of the growing season—right up to Christmas in some cases. So planning is especially important. If you have decided you do want to have a vegetable and/or flower garden, here are some things to consider. Successful gardening is a process. Don't skip over any step or the results may be disappointing. References are included for those who want to know more.

Decide: consider what you and your family like to eat, what plants you would like to include in the garden, and consider what quantities will be produced and what you will do with any excess such as canning, pickling, drying, and fermenting. A good reference is by Pleasant (Home Grown Pantry, 2017).

Soil condition: soil has been tested and necessary supplements identified for what you plan to grow; soil has been turned at least 3 weeks ago, supplements added, and it is now ready to receive sets or seeds. If you don't understand why soil is so important or why you should wait three weeks, a good reference to read is Teeming with Microbes by Lowenfels and Lewis (revised, 2010). The life of soil and its relationship to plant growth and nutrition is clearly explained.

Garden map: Measure the area and make a diagram to show where things will be planted; consider the full grown size of plants and plan spaces accordingly to determine the number of sets or seeds to plant. See Square Foot Gardening (3rd ed., Bartholomew) for an excellent discussion with diagrams for garden layouts.

Lay out soaker hoses and water lines around the planting area before you plant, adjusting lines to your diagram of the planting area. In this column, there has been a lot of discussion each year about the best way to provide water for the garden. The main point is to have the watering system in place before the oppressive heat of summer threatens to destroy your garden.

Shop locally for seeds and/or sets. Select plants that are known to be hardy for this area. There are some really fun seed catalogues you can read in January, but the time has come to choose, so shop locally unless you ordered ahead.

If you can make yourself wait until Good Friday, your chances of avoiding late freezes will be much greater than if you plant on a sunny day very early in the season. But if you do plant early, arrange for row covers or caps for tender plants. Until the soil temperature reaches 68 degrees, most plants will not progress towards maturity. If they freeze, it's a do-over.

Finally, keep a journal along with your garden map. Show on the map (pencil is a good idea) what you planted, and where, and when you planted it. Write a few notes through the season to describe your journey. Keep photographs along the way. This is an exciting process to document.

Enjoy spring.
